Twenty-one days have they been en route from South America, where they have been literally astonishing the natives for the last three months. For more than two days has the Laura M. Starin, with Abbey's satellites and plenty of good cheer on board, been cruising about waiting for the Biela.

The good vessel came in this morning. At Quarantine Coquelin and Hading and Coquelin cadet (cadet signifies ''junior'') were greeted, and very shortly afterwards trans-terred their allegiance from the Biela to the

The eminent French actor looks exactly like the picture published in this column. He was dressed with scrupulous care and looked around him with the greatest interest. "I have enjoyed my trip in South America very much indeed," he said, "and was particularly interested in my audiences. Strange to say, I was better supported by the Spaniards than by the French element. I have heard so much about New York that I am glad to be able at last to see it."

JANE HADING.

Mme. Hading is charming. She were a red Federa-like dress, with a neatly fitting cloak. Over this was a heavy gray travelling ulster. Mme. Hading smiled from beneath an enormous black hat, and she smiles with all her heart and soul.

"I am glad to touch earth again," she remarked, as she touched it very lightly with a dainty foot. "I have been ill all the way from South America. I expected to have found that country uncivilized, but was intensely surprised to fine it thorou hly cultured and appreciative."

Mme Hading was inclined to be ecstatic about New York Harbor, which she thought charming.

Coquelin cadet, who is the image of his father, especially since he let his beard grow, had very little to say. "I was sick coming from South America," was his pleasing regnark, "not because of the sea, but on account of the cooking."

The company supporting Coquelin includes Massrs. Abel, Duquesne, Jean Coquelin, Deroy, Ramy, Stuart, Borel, Boulanger and Mmes. Marguerite Barety, Bertha Stuart, Pauline Patry, Berthe Gilbert, Marguerite Murgure, Renée Lemurcier, Jenny Rose and A. Lervich.

Capt. Gleadell, of the Germanic, Finds His

Capt. Benj. Gleadell, a veteran commander n the service of the White Star line, died on his steamship, the Germanic, on the vessel's first day out on the voyage which ended in New York this morning.

The captain was apparently in the best of health when the ship left Liverpool, and when it made its usual stop at Queenstown he was still in excellent spirits.

The weather was hazy, Sept. 27, when the ship had got out to sea, and the captain went below to look at the charts and ascertain his exact position.

He did not return to the deek, but no one thought that anything might be wrong until the next morning. Then one of the officers ent to the captain's room, found it locked, and was unable to obtain any response to his repeated summons. He finally burst the door open, and found the captain's dead body lying on the floor face downward.

Dr. Brice, the ship's surgeon, examined the body and gave it as his opinion that death had followed an attack of apoplexy several hours before the discovery of the remains.

Capt. Gleadell was one of the most capable and efficient officers in the service of the White Star line. Beloved by his employers, his officers and his crew, his death creates a vacancy in the company's service not easily filled.

Besides his record as an officer and gentleman his record as a saver of life adds greatly to his credit.

It is estimated that during his career with the White Star Company he had saved nearly one hundred lives on different occasions, and he was the possessor of several medals from humane societies, while on the back of his certificate was written two recognitions of life saving.

on the back of his certificate was written two recognitions of life saving.

Another of his well-earned testimonials was a gold watch, presented by the United States Government for life-saving services.

He was born in the little town of Lincoln, in Linconshire, in the south of England, in 1829, and was just entering his sixtieth year when death closed his career.

He married carly in life, but his wife died a short time ago, leaving him with a family consisting of five children and one married daughter.

Party Leaders in Conference This Afternoon.

Senator Gorman and Secretary Whitney in Long Consultation with Croker and Power About the Mayoralty-An Offer to Congressman Cox-Tammany Firmly Opposed to Mayor Hewitt.

The conference between the members of the National Democratic Committee and the leaders of the County Democracy and Tammany Hall, at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, lasted until after midnight. Among those who attended the conference were United States Senators Gorman and Ransom, Secretary Whitney, Congressman William L. Scott, Commissioner Croker Sheriff Grant, ex-Mayor Cooper Judge Power and Herman Oelrichs, the New York member of the National Committee.

Messrs. Gorman Scott and Whitney represented the National Administration and argued in favor of harmony between the two machines. They said that President Cleveland was now impressed with the belief that there should be a union on the County ticket.

Congressman Scott, who is a very warm personal and political friend of the President, appealed for a union. He begged the representatives of Tammany Hall and the County Democracy to unite on a candidate County Democracy to unite on a candidate for Mayor.

Commissioner Croker said that under no circumstances would Tammany Hall nominate or indorse Abram S. Hewitt. He said Tammany Hall was willing to do anything that would tend to the success of the National and State tickets, but it could not afford to swallow Mayor Hewitt.

Judge Power spoke in favor of Mayor Hewitt.

Winkle," who is playing the opening engagement of his season in Pittsburg this week, has just announced that he and his three sons will cast their first votes in a Presidential election in November next.

Although fifty-eight years old, Mr. Jefferson has never voted before; neither have his sons, Tom, Charles and Joseph, jr. They have arranged this route so as to allow them to reach their home in Hohokus, New Jersey, near Passaic, in time for election day.

Mr. Jefferson last night said: "Yes, we are going to cast our first votes, and they will all be for Cleveland and Thurman and tariff reform. Mr. Cleveland has given the American people a quiet and conservative administration that should win for him the respect of every thinking man in the country. He has done nothing to show that he is an advocate of free thinking man in the country. He has done nothing to show that he is an advocate of free trade, but on the contrary wants nothing but fair trade."

The three sons of Jefferson think the same as the r father, and say that if the result in New Jersev should be close their votes may make a big change in it.

PALLADONI HANGED

at Bridgeport.

Speech to the Reporters.

"May the Laws of Connecticut Be Sealed With This Italian's Blood."

He Fell at 10.39 and Died a Horrible Death from Strangulation

PERCHAL TO THE EVENING WORLD. BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 5.-Philip Palladoni, the fratricide, was hanged in the jail here at 10.39 this morning.

At 10.30 the death march from the cell was led by Sheriff Clarkson and Sheriff Pinke. Palladoni was supported by Father Leo and Father Murphy. Following were Sheriffs Glover and Dyer. Palladon: advanced with firm tread.

Mounting the scaffold he kept his gaze riveted on the crucifix held by Father Leo. Clarkson drew over the black cap.

While Leo was reciting the prayer Clarkson gave the signal and Glover sprung the trap. Falladoni was fainting.

When he dropped at the time given above the black cap fell off and the convulsions of his face were terrible. His neck was not broken, and he died in twelve minutes from strangulation.

when he dropped at the time given above the black cap fell off and the convulsions of his face were terrible. His neck was not broken, and he died in twelve minutes from strangulation.

His eyes and tongue protruded, presenting a sickening sight.

After half an hour the body was cut down and taken possession of by Undertaker Ford, Surrounding the jail was an immense crowd, which slowly dispersed when informed of the consumation of the execution.

After the execution the Sheriff refused to permit the physicians to undertake to restore life by use of a galvanic battery.

During the night the condemned man gazed sullenly through the bars of his ceil upon a huddling group of newspaper men.

A strong contract was presented in the passive, generous countenance of Rev. Pather Lee, the spiritual adviser of the condemned man. Attired in his long, severely plain cassack, drawn in the waist with a white cord, he ma e a siriking contrast to the surrounding group. The age of the murderer is twenty-four years. He can neither read nor write. Below the medium slature, he is possessed of a repulsive countenance, closely crop; ed hair and a stubby mustache does not add to his attractiveness.

At 10.50 last night Palladoni went to sleep in his na row quarters and slumbered peacefully until after 12.

Deputy Sheriffs Driscoll and Brewster constituted the death watch.

At 12.30 Palladoni, accompanied by Father Lee, repaired to the jail chapel and remained until 2 o'clock engaged in devout prayer.

After going back to his cell Palladoni paced restlessly to and fro. Father Lee expressed the opinion that he had the condemned man under great control, and that he would follow him like a lamb, even if allowed his freedom.

At 2.20 Palladoni sought his cot, did not undress or remove his shoes. In ten minutes the dea h watch heard him breathing heavily in sound slumber.

At 3.30 the prisoner awoke and gazed about his cell. He began to wail and cry:

"Peveru, madre, povero padro, O porte sorelli"—Oh, my poor father, mother chapel with the death-warrant, which he read while Father Leo translated it to Palladoni. The prisoner stood erect listening attentively. Not a muscle quivered.

Afterwards Palladoni visited the cells and shook hands with all the prisoners. He partook of no breakfast.

At 9 o'clock he was dressed for execution. Father Leo spoke to the crowd of reporters, saying: 'You of the press should advocate that there be no capital punishment. This should be the last one, and I hope to good it will be. May the laws of Connecticut be sealed with this Italian's blood. If Victor Emanuel had never invaded Italy that nation would be a happy and prosperous one to day and her sons would not have been driven to this strange land. Italy is a ruined country. Oh, you do not understand what it is. There are two Italians in the cell next to Palladoni for fighting. They tell a sad story of Italy. They death of Palladoni may serve as a warning to the Italians not to use knives or pistois. I hope it will."

When he was sentenced he had $27. Of this amount $10 was sent by the prison superintendent to an Italian banking house to be forwarded to Palladoni's parents in Italy. A letter was sent with the money giving the facts of the fatal quarrel and asking forgiveness. Ever since that time the condemned man has waited for the answering Palladon's trial was begun on the 19th of September, 1887, and lasted for several days. The result was that he was found guilty of fratricide and received his sentence on the 23d of the same month.

During his trial he displayed a most revengeful spirit and his language was something shocking. When he was sentenced to death he exclaimed: "I don't care a —." All along he has been morose and was constantly indulging in ribald language.

Recently however, he has shown a small degree of improvement. This is due to the teachings of Father Leo, who is looking after his spiritual welfare. Every morning since the death watch was placed on Palladoni the good priest celebrated mass for the repose of the condemned's soul. Under the priest's care Palladoni became a trifle more subdued, although at times, when Father Leo was not present, he still indulged in much profanity and foul language. > SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD. DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 5 .- Mr Blaine's trip to East Saginaw and the Upper Peninsula has been abandoned. He was to have left this morning at 9 o'clock, but he decided not to do so on account of a severe hoarseness, which prevented his speaking above a whisper. His condition is not serious, but it was deemed advisable not to make the trip to-day, in order to save him for his speeches in Indiana.

The Michigan Republican managers are greatly disappointed, as they had counted on having Blaine speak in the Upper Peninsular and the event has been extensively advertised. The party left this morning, taking Gen. King and other speakers, but they will Walker Blaine said: "Father caught a little cold and complained yesterday of a slight hoarseness, and this was increased by his speaking in the open air vesterday. This morning he could hardly speak above a whisper, and we thought the best thing for him to do was to stay indoors and nurse his cold. He will be all right by Monday, and will not have to cancel any of his other dates."

"Would you run against S. S. Cox or Mr. Whitney, if either of those gentlemen should receive the nomination from another organization?" asked the reporter.

"I have stopped answering conundrums," he replied, and walked away.

The Committee appointed to notify the Mayor of his nomination had not been heard from at 12 o'clock. It was the impression they would not call to-day.
